

MIDNIGHT CRY

Fight for this crime tour

Midnight Cry delivers a powerful performance that shines far beyond a band with humble roots in Deer Park, Washington. From symphonic rock ballads to soundtrack-like orchestration and beautiful vocal harmonies, their style can be difficult to categorize as they draw influences from a wide range of genres.

Midnight Cry's upcoming "Fight For This Crime" tour is riddled with thematic material addressing the search for truth and meaning, pulling out the stops to bring an expression of every human heart in a stunning audio-visual production. Their new album bearing the same name will be released in November, just before the tour begins. With shows across the Northwest, the "Fight For This Crime" tour promises to be an experience not to be missed.

Midnight Cry's performances at the Bing Crosby Theater will feature an opening act by local artist Cami Bradley and her band.

"When evil is praised for being evil, and good punished for being good, then the just must rise and fight for their crimes."
